

A web site displaying the life and times of William Geshwender, including his projects, previous work experience, early life, and some games.

geshwen1.github.io will focus on the projects that have been completed alone and with teams, with detailed descriptions and images. It will also focus on creating a resume that's interactive for use when William is looking for work post-graduation. It will add interactive buttons to display information about each of William's work experiences and education.

Hopefully random google searches result to me

Hopefully this will suffice as a Comparable, I laid out my end goal of the personal website, I did some research while at work and thus couldn't save the screenshots.
